For example, property rights are the rights of Erga Omnes and therefore must be pressed against anyone to destroy this right. The law of Erga Omne (a statutory law) can be distinguished by the basis of the law other than unexpected, except the contracting party. Erga Omnes is a Latin expression meaning "for all" or "against all". International rights in international law have been used as a legal term describing obligations owed to countries as a whole. Erga Omnes is a commitment to a general and undeniable interest in preserving fundamental rights and preventing violations. Therefore, every country has the right to complain about violations. Examples of Erga Omnes standards are piracy and genocide. This concept was recognized in the International Court's decision on the Barcelona traction case [1] [(Belgium v. Spain) (second phase) in paragraph 33 33]: ...Human personhood, including protection from slavery and racial discrimination.

Some relevant property rights are reflected in general international law..., others are provided by international instruments of a universal or quasi-universal nature. Examples in the advisory statement of July 9, 2004 stated that the International Court of Justice "the right of peoples to self-determination" is a real ergomnes. [2] The discovery mentioned in Art. 22 V lkerbund Federation. Following the decision of 20 July 2012 between Belgium and Senegal, the International Court of Justice stated that, with regard to the Convention against Torture, "each State party to the Congress fulfills its obligations." [3] The International Court of Justice in its Interim Order dated 23 January 2020 found that The Gambia opposed Myanmar in the genocide of the Rohingya on the grounds of genocide against Myanmar. [4] The International Legal Affairs Commission of the UN Commission codified the ERGA OMNES principle in its articles on State responsibility. They allow all countries to count on the responsibility of a state for the fact that another state arose due to its illegal actions if "obligations to the international community as a whole are violated." The ILC explicitly refers to the ERGO OMNES principle in its comments and adoption of the Barcelona Influenza MCJ.
